

Ember's Pizza Night

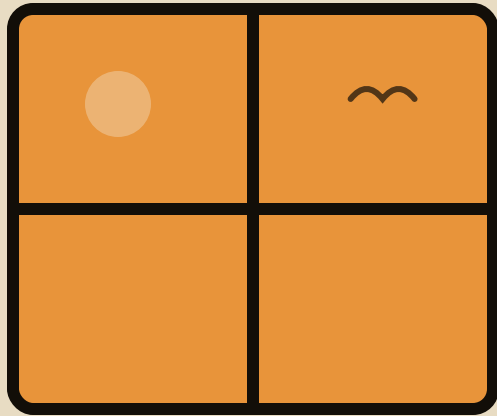

A Summer Story from New England Crust

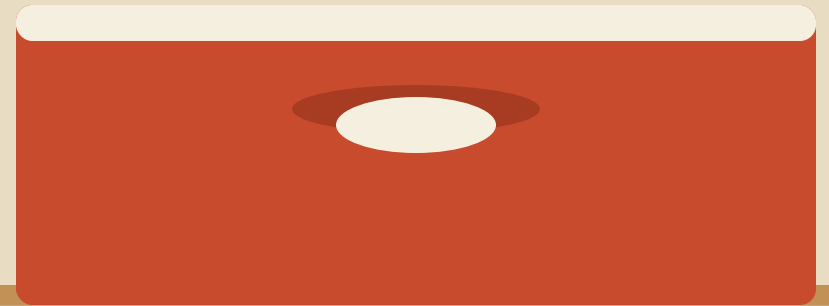

Salt Air & Open Flame

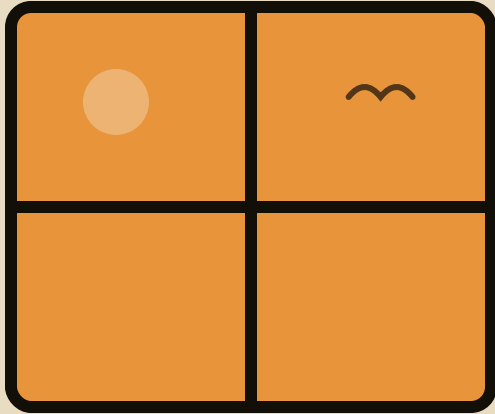

On a little street near the sea, where the salt air tickles your nose, lives a fluffy golden dog named Ember.

"Tonight is pizza night!"

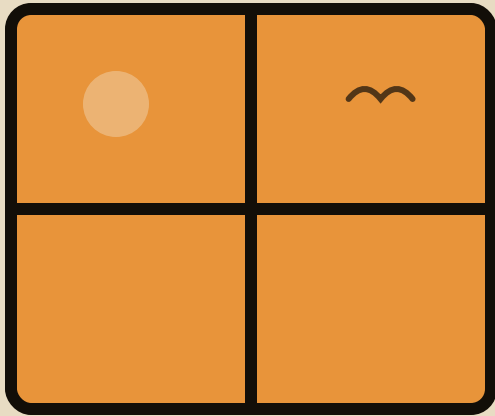

One summer morning, Ember heard the most wonderful words in the whole wide world: "Tonight is pizza night!"

All day long, the dough grew in its bowl — puffy and round like a cloud.
Ember watched. And watched. And watched.

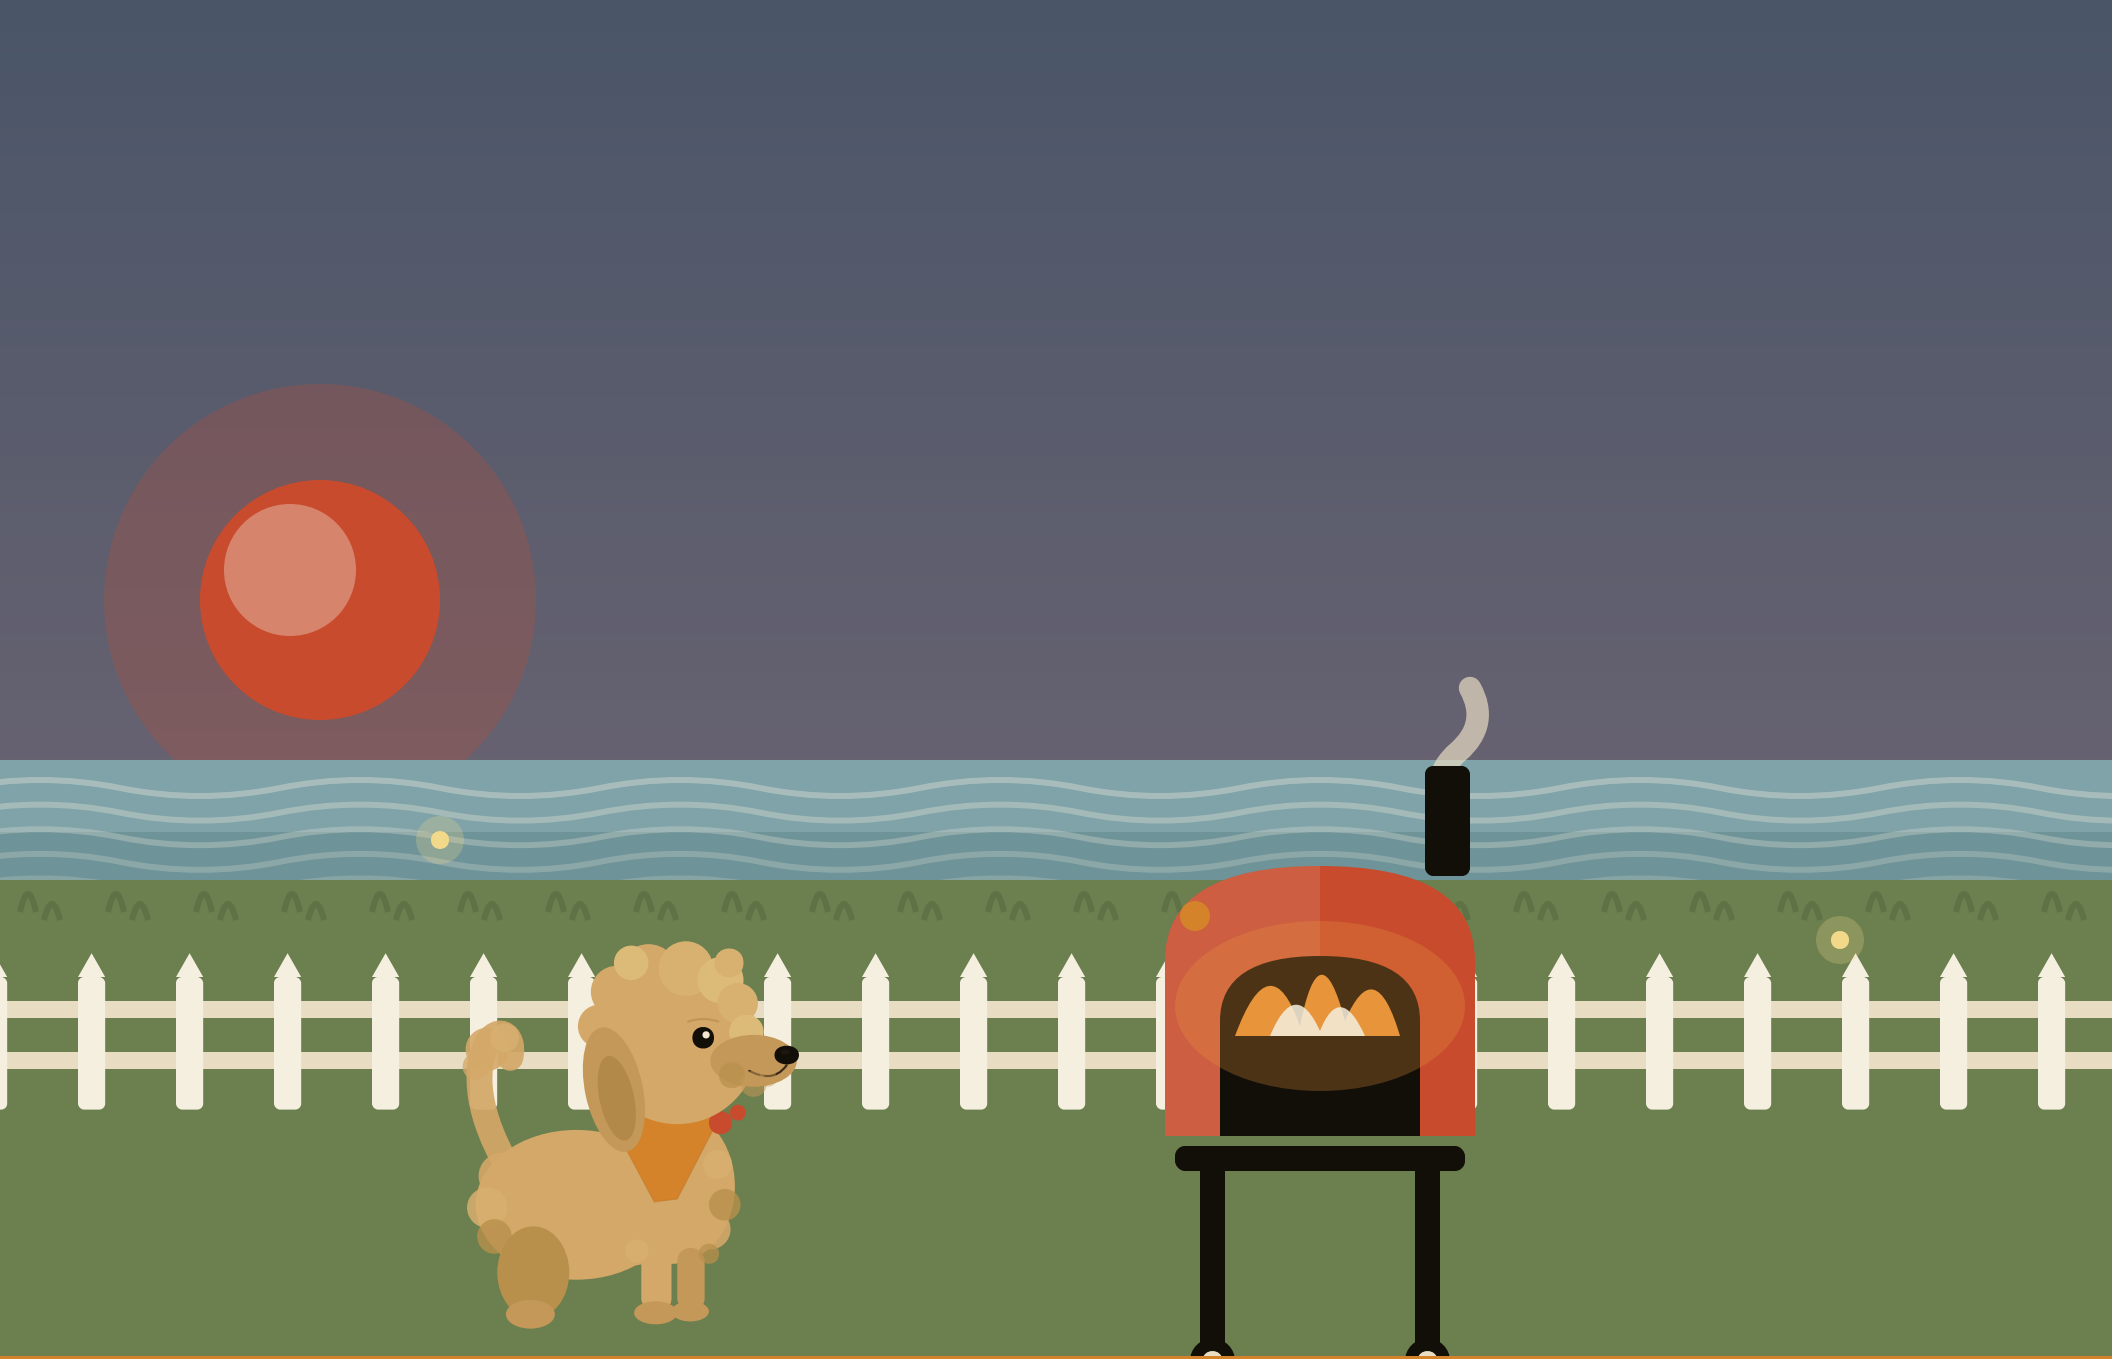

In the garden, Ember helped pick sweet red tomatoes and soft green leaves of basil. “Good helper, Ember!”

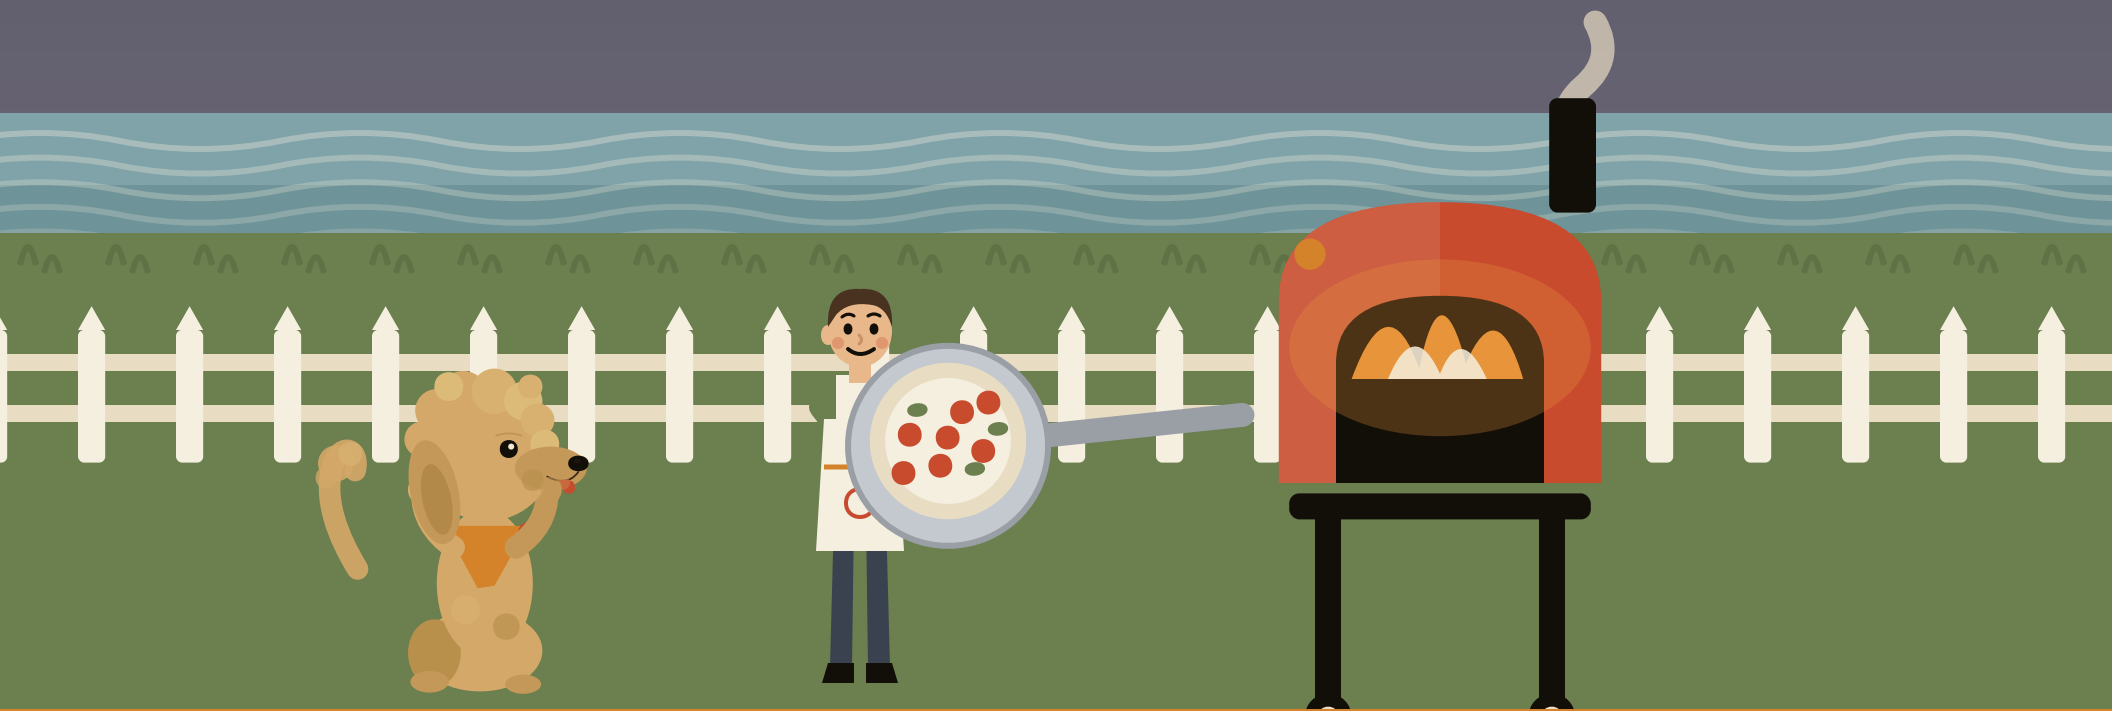

Then came the flour — poof! It floated like snow in July.
A big white dot landed right on Ember's nose.

Up went the dough, spinning in the air! Round and round, wide and thin.
Ember spun in happy circles too.

Outside, the little oven crackled and glowed, warm and amber like a tiny sunset. The backyard smelled of woodsmoke Whoosh! The pizza slid inside on the shiny peel.

Ember watched the cheese go bubble, bubble, bubble.

The string lights blinked on. Fireflies came out to visit.
Friends filled the picnic table under the summer sky.

And when the very last slice was gone, Ember got the very best part:
a warm, crunchy piece of crust. Munch!

The waves hushed. The stars came out one by one.
And Ember fell asleep by the warm little oven,
dreaming of salt air... open flame... and pizza night.

The End

Sweet dreams, Ember. See you at the next pizza night.

New England Crust

Salt Air & Open Flame